

Code of Ethics:

A Self-Study Accreditation Program for Nursing Education

Joy McIlvaine

CODE of ETHICS

Build a well-developed nursing workforce to meet the needs of current and future patients. (NLN, n.d.).

Meet the healthcare needs and advance the options for evidence informed interventions for patients, their family, and community through scholarship and best practice (ANA, n.d.).

Honor the principles that reflects the community served in the complexity of diversity, inclusion, and equity (NLN, n.d.).

Empower nurses to work at the top of their credentials with well-defined roles to provide excellence in care (ANPD, n.d.).

Work with nursing and provide educational opportunities with integrity and professionalism (ANA, n.d.).

Advocate for self-care, well-being, improved mental health, and emotional support programs that recognize nurses' complex work while providing healthcare (ANA, n.d.; NLN, n.d.).

Continuously care for patients and community with respect, empathy, and compassion striving towards excellence and quality (ANA, n.d.).

References

American Nurses Association (ANA). (n.d.). The gold standard for the future of nursing: The code of ethics for nurses. <https://codeofethics.ana.org/home>

Association for Nursing Professional Development (ANPD). (n.d.). About us. <https://www.anpd.org/About/About-Us>
National League of Nursing (NLN). (n.d.). Mission and strategic plan. <https://www.nln.org/about/about/mission-and-strategic-plan>